

Tourists&Travellers

Tourists or travellers? This debate resounds in the opening pages of Paul Bowles novel The Sheltering Sky: Whereas the tourist generally hurries back home at the end of a few weeks or months, the traveler belonging no more to one place than to the next, moves slowly over periods of years, from one part of the earth to another. While the tourist is someone who sets his mind to his return home the moment he sets his foot on his destination, the traveller is not bothered at all by such thoughts and heads forward unconcerned by limits of space and time. But how do we tell the one from the other in different situations? It is probably impossible to tell tout court, but we can rely on some signals, such as the way they dress or behave. So, without any ambition to present you with a scientific work, I am pleased to offer you some of my pictures of potential tourists and/or travellers in the Campania Region, taken between winter 2014 and summer 2015. Enjoy them! Turisti o viaggiatori? La cosa viene discussa dai protagonisti del romanzo Il te nel deserto, di Paul Bowles all'inizio del libro: il turista e colui che pensa al momento di tornare a casa già appena ha messo piede a terra dopo un viaggio in mare (o in aereo) per giungere sul luogo di destinazione. Il viaggiatore, invece, non si pone affatto questo problema e si dirige verso il lontano e il futuro senza limiti di spazio e di tempo. Ecco, probabilmente, la vera grande differenza tra le due categorie. Ma come facciamo a comprendere, di volta in volta, se quelli che abbiamo davanti sono turisti o viaggiatori? Probabilmente non possiamo comprenderlo, tout court. Ma forse ci sono segnali, nel loro modo di vestire e di comportarsi, che potrebbero darci delle risposte in tal senso. Allora, senza avere l'ambizione di proporvi un lavoro scientifico, mi piace sottoporvi centinaia di scatti relativi a possibili turisti e/o viaggiatori in Campania, raccolti tra l'inverno 2014 e l'estate 2015. Enjoy them!
